RE: AMT Day

VICE PRESIDENTS

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

GARY YINGST
Director ATD

Today has been recognized by organized labor Unions and many states as Aviation Maintenance Technicians Day; a day set aside to recognize and honor the Aircraft Mechanic's vast knowledge and expertise of their craft in an ever changing technological industry. The Aviation Maintenance Technicians profess an unheralded amount of pride in their work. Their professionalism, quality and safety are unmistakable benchmarks for the successful air transportation system in our country today. We would also like to recognize the AMTA organization and those Mechanics that have worked so hard to bring about this day of recognition for their fellow AMT's across our nation.

GARY SHULTS

These talented men and women work tirelessly behind the scenes, around the clock, at airports and maintenance bases across the country. The flying public takes safe air travel for granted. But we know better - you can't put a price on safety. Join us in honoring the Aviation Maintenance Technicians that make it happen every day.
Thank you.

Fraternally,

Gary Yingst
