It would be an honor if you would join the Transport Workers Union (TWU) on Thursday, May 17, 2007 at 10:00-15:00. As you know, TWU is working with the AFL-CIO in conjunction with the IAM's annual Day of Action on the Mall in Washington, DC, May 17, 2007. This year's event has been expanded to become a broad-based transportation labor demonstration.

So far several presidential candidates including Senators Hillary Clinton, Joe Biden and Rep. Dennis Kucinich have committed to speak. In addition, many Members of the House and Senate are expected to join the rally. Unfortunately Senator Obama declined.

The theme "Enough is Enough," the Day of Action is designed to demonstrate our resolve to the challenges we face. We want to highlight the need for change in the direction of our government, and elect a President who cares about working people. We need legislators that will not only defend working people, but will challenge the corporate giants that continue to do harm to the transportation workers. Specifically, the Day of Action will provide an opportunity for transportation labor to show it will fight those inside and outside of government that trample on workers' rights, destroy pensions, executive compensation, selling off jobs through globalization, pursue reckless outsourcing and privatization schemes, compromise safety and security, and neglect the needs of our transportation system and its workers. Most importantly, with the presidential election primary season already in full swing, it will provide an opportunity for transportation workers to demand more from those politicians seeking the support of transportation labor in 2008.

The speaker program will begin at 12:00 noon.

Thank you for your support for this important event.

Sincerely and in Solidarity,

James C. Little
International President
